

Comic 1

This comic is about the democrat's response to the federal deficit. They want to lower defense spending by employing new technologies.

The reason that this comic was drawn was to simply illustrate how cutting defense spending is vital to us Americans as the economy continues to go deeper into deficit. With that in mind, the main purpose of this was to signify how sequestration is seen by the United States, which is it is a huge deal as many families will be negatively impacted by this as well as businesses and companies.

In fact, there are many inefficiencies and extreme waste not only with the pentagon budgets, but the non-defense budgets as well. This adheres to military spending and being lowered, while providing the United States with new technologies that will basically help with creating a better defense to make families not only feel safer in their homes, but this will strengthen the economy to help create and more jobs stabilize the budgets.

Comic 2

This comic shows the divide between Wall Street and the rest of the country. While Wall Street caused the Great Recession, they didn't feel the effects like the rest of the country did. With that in mind, it is evident that the Wall Street was signified as a kind of class. This showed the wealth that the people from Wall Street were still able to obtain whereas others in society were dealing with the aftermath of the Recession such as not being able to have enough money, or food for a family, etc.

Now Wall Street was still better off for one main reason. This is because the government bailed out the banks. Obama is portrayed as a communist because he used government money on private industry.
