

The Great Depression vs. The Great Recession

Cause and Effects Responses and Responsibilities

The Great Depression

The up's the down's
and turn arounds

The depression was the result of the stock market crashing and no back up plan the lack of innovation creating no jobs. President Roosevelt was elected during this difficult time and his plans worked. He had implemented plans that could benefit the people. His plan was to give people job quickly while the bank was being bailed out by congress. He created the New Deal policy.

The Great Recession

What?

The great recession was something that happened recently. Something that was caused by many mistakes made by the United States.

Why?

The United States decided to trust with their economy. When they give homes to people with no background checks. They weren't good for their word.

How?

They decided to be trusting. Therefore they weren't doing proper credit scores and checks and giving things to people who weren't good for it.

Presidential Decisions : A plan for America

The New Deal

One of the first things president Roosevelt did was have a four day bank bailout holiday.

This was the opportunity for congress to restore the banking system. He then started programs like the Civil Conservation Corps.

These ideas proved to be successful and helped America get out of the Depression.

Obama Plan

The Obama Administration is trying everything they can to make sure they keep us out of the recession. They are implementing programs and policies for people to follow. Programs. He has foreign policies and National Security Strategies. Focusing on the budget for America.

Final Thoughts

America has been through some rough spaces but we always seem to have a strong leader to lead us along.