

IN THE SHADOW OF THE BANYAN

Vaddey
Ratner

How does childhood change in different environments?

Raami was too young to even understand how to interrupt the story interprets to. So even when the mother told the stories to Raami, Raami was still in her own mindset. It was like the mother didn't even say anything to her.

“I realize my mom die, I know I would be alone. I start to picture my house, my kitchen, my family”

In the movie, “The missing picture” the mom died when the main character was 12. He had to start working to support himself, instead of being like a normal 12 year-old.

“I told you stories to give you wings, Raami, so that you would never be trapped by anything- your name, your title, the limits of your body, this world's suffering”

“The problem with being seven-I remember myself at that age-is that you're aware of so much, and yet you understand so little. So you imagine the worst”

Some people never had an option to be child, because the environment they live in where they have to grow up to support their family and their self.

