Annotated Bibliography

Carle, E. (1969). The Very Hungry Caterpillar. New York City, NY: Philohmel Books.

"The Very Hungry Caterpillar" is about a caterpillar's metamorphosis. Eric Carle is an accomplished author and this work has been read by many generations. I will use this source as a guide for my e-book.

DiPucchio, Kelly, and LeUyen Pham. Grace for President. New York, NY: Hyperion for Children, 2008. Print.

"Grace for President" is about the American electoral college. When Grace, a young girl, realizes that the United States has never had a female president; she is determined to become the first. This source was used to investigate the elements of children's literature.

Hayes-Roth, Barbara, Heidi Maldonado, and Marcia Moraes. "Designing for diversity: Multi-cultural characters for a multi-cultural world." Proceedings of IMAGINA. 2002.

This essay explains the ten key perceived qualities of characters. The article also emphasizes that the design of characters is dependent on human behavior. The writers of this article are professors at Stanford University. I will be using this source to ensure that my images stimulate the readers minds.

Hood, Ann. Creating Character Emotions. Cincinnati, OH: Story Press, 1998. Print.

This book gives advice on how to display emotions in your characters images and speech. I used this source to help Anastasia create the pictures for my book. Ann Hood is an American novelist and short-story writer.

Jonas, Pearl.

Ms. Jonas is my mentor for my capstone project. She is a high school history teacher and has been teaching for several years. We will have weekly or bi-weekly meetings to discuss the progress and next steps of my capstone.

Lazar, Daniel

Mr. Lazar is the principal at Albert M. Greenfield Elementary School. He is one of my contacts at the school. He will make the final decision about when I can have the author reading at Greenfield. He will most likely have to approve the advertisements for Greenfield.

Shields, Brenda

Ms. Brenda Shields is the librarian at Albert M. Greenfield Elementary School in Philadelphia, PA. She is one of my contacts at Greenfield. We will be making plans for me to set up advertisements in the school and to schedule my author reading at the school.

"Story and picture books (ages 3-7)." The Child and the Book: A Psychological and Literary Exploration. New York: Cambridge U Press, 1981. 46-66. Print.

This chapter explains the differences between picture books and story books. It is good to use (in your book) things that children are naturally attracted to. However, overusing some elements in the images can distract from the text. I plan on using this information to revise my ideas for images.

Temple, Charles A., Evelyn Blossom Freeman, and Joy F. Moss. Children's books in children's hands: An introduction to their literature. Allyn & Bacon, 1998.

This book is an exploration of children and the books they read. While the book gives tips on how to encourage children's interest to read, I used it as a marketing strategy. I'm going to use the information in this book to advertise my book at Greenfield and in school.

Timothy Boyle

Mr. Boyle is the principal at Science Leadership Academy Middle School. He is one of my contacts at the school. He will make the final decision about when I can have the author reading at SLAMS. He will most likely have to approve the advertisements for SLAMS .
