

Annotated Bibliography

Chiara Nemati

Denver, David, and Gordon Hands. "Does Studying Politics Make a Difference? The Political Knowledge, Attitudes and Perceptions of School Students." British Journal of Political Science 20, no. 2 (1990): 263-79. <http://www.jstor.org/stable/193973>.

The British Journal of Political Science published a piece by Denver David and Gordon Hands that explores the topic of politics in education. This journal talks about the importance of studying politics for school students. It also explores the way students look and feel about politics. This journal will allow me to understand how to structure my journal so that students will be interested in reading it. This is a reliable source because it is a well known scholarly journal.

Dilley, Patrick. "Conducting Successful Interviews: Tips for Intrepid Research." Theory Into Practice 39, no. 3 (2000): 131-37. <http://www.jstor.org/stable/1477544>.

This book is about the art of a successful interview. It talks about the way journalists use certain techniques to get more than just the surface information. I will be able to use this source to conduct successful interviews. While working with the NSC I will be required to conduct interviews and I would need to get the most out of the interviews. This source will allow me to make sure that I am covering everything I need to be in an interview. This will also be a useful source when helping other students who are writing interview based political pieces. This source is reliable because Patrick Dilley is a professor of education at Southern Illinois University.

"Nationalities Service Center." Nationalities Service Center. Accessed February 01, 2017. <https://nscphila.org/>.

This source is the website of the organization that I will be working with over the course of the next month. The NSC is a non-profit organization that helps refugees and immigrants get settled in this nation. I am using them as a source to educate my peers on organizations that exist in Philadelphia that can prove helpful to them. Also I want people to be aware of all the help Philadelphia is giving refugees and immigrants. I will be conducting interviews with the organization to get a deeper understanding of their history and what their mission is. This ties into the current political atmosphere and will prove interesting to see how their mission has changed.

Pasek, Josh, Kenski, Kate, Jamieson Kathleen, and Romer, Daniel. "America's Youth and Community Engagement How Use of Mass Media Is Related to Civic Activity and Political Awareness in 14- to 22-Year-Olds." Communication Research 33, no. 3(2206): 1-21. <http://journals.sagepub.com/doi/pdf/10.1177/0093650206287073>.

The research paper was written by three people. They were analyzing the results of a research that had been conducted. The research was discussing the effects of media and the community engagement levels. This is a reliable source because it was a research paper written under the university's names. Because I am creating a political journal that will exist online and in print it is important for me to understand the effects of social media on political engagement. Through this research I will better understand if creating an online magazine will hurt my capstone more than it will help. It will also give me some tips on how to engage the students in the journal.

"Penn Political Review." Penn Political Review. 2017. Accessed February 01, 2017.

<http://pennpoliticalreview.org/>.

This website is University of Pennsylvania's political magazine. In this site there are multiple pieces that explore the ideas of political issues that are global but also community based. This is a great example that I can use when structuring my magazine. I will also be able to use it to understand what different topics the public is interested in reading about. I think that this is a perfect source to use because it is written by college students and approved by the university. It is reliable and an amazing example that I can look at. This source encompasses the core values that I want to include in my magazine.

Ruth, Linda. "How To Create A Successful Magazine." PSCS Consulting Inc.

<http://www.pscsconsulting.com/special-reports/How-to-Create-a-Successful-Magazine-PSCS-Consulting.pdf>.

This source shows the steps to creating a successful magazine. Because my project is a magazine, it is important that I figure out what makes a magazine work. This will allow me to create a product that is enjoyed by a wider audience and can clearly model a working project. I hope to be able to follow these guidelines so that future SLA students will have access to an example that excels. The author of this source is Linda Ruth, the CEO of PSCS Consulting. This is her area of expertise, making this a reliable source.

Saleh, Naveed. "13." In A Complete Guide to Article Writing, 213-16. Blue Ash, OH: Writer's Digest Books, 2013.

This book was written by Naveed Saleh, he writes about writing for online and print markets. I focused on the section about opinion writing because this is the section I have been writing for. Most of my pieces will be opinion pieces. The goal of my journal is to get the opinions of the students and community and not just report the facts. This source outlines what makes an effective opinion piece and how to write an opinion piece. I will be able to learn from this outline and continue to use it. I will also be able to keep it in mind when I am editing work. Overall it will allow me to create a successful opinion journal.

Zaal, Mayida. "Islamophobia in Classrooms, Media, and Politics." Journal of Adolescent & Adult Literacy 55, no. 6 (2012): 555-58. <http://www.jstor.org/stable/41827859>.

This piece was published in the Journal of Adolescent & Adult Literacy and talks about how Islamophobia was introduced into classrooms after the events of 9/11. It discusses how this could be changed and the ways this should have been taught. This source will allow me to understand in what ways I should present controversial information. I would also like to grapple with the controversial ideas such as this one. It is also a call to educators to teach students in a different way that would be more beneficial and the journal is the way I will be using.

EVANGELISTA, MATTHEW. "Teaching Writing about International Relations: Government." In Local Knowledges, Local Practices: Writing in the Disciplines at Cornell, edited by Monroe Jonathan, 165-70. University of Pittsburgh Press, 2003.

<http://www.jstor.org.ezproxy2.library.drexel.edu/stable/j.ctt9qh4x1.17>.

This source explores teaching writing about government in a college course. It will help me understand what people are looking for when it comes to writing about politics. It talks about forming your argument based off the evidence. I will be able to read through and find many pointers on how to write and improve my pieces. It also emphasizes the point of reading over the draft to make sure that the end matches the introduction. Also making sure that the evidence strengthens your point of view and does not obscure it. This book was written by a Cornell professor, so I am able to use it as a reliable source.

"Welcome to the Purdue OWL." Purdue OWL: Journalism and Journalistic Writing. Accessed February 02, 2017.
<https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/735/02/>.

This source outlines the common guidelines of a journalistic piece. It also describes them and makes sure that they will be integrated well into the article. This source will allow me to make sure I am not missing any components in my writing. It will keep it clear and concise. I will be able to go back to this source and look through each of my articles and make them very professional. What makes this source perfect for me is that it fits for any type of journalistic writing. It is not solidified to only news or features. This is a reliable source because it is from an institution.