

Hector Sanchez

A tall, cylindrical stone tower, likely a lighthouse or observation tower, stands on a grassy hillside. The tower is constructed from rough-hewn stones and features three large, arched openings at its base. The top of the tower is flat, with a small tree growing from the center. The background shows rolling green hills under a bright blue sky with scattered white clouds. The overall scene is a mix of natural beauty and historical architecture.

“ NOTHING WORTH
HAVING COMES EASY”