Alexander, Emily. "Ridiculously Wealthy Food Companies That Don't Do Enough Charity." Mashed.com, Mashed, 21 June 2021, <https://www.mashed.com/231111/ridiculously-wealthy-food-companies-that-dont-do-enough-charity/>.

I chose this source because it describes a couple of companies that do the bare minimum to give back to the community. This can help me because when I go to start presenting I can narrow down the top three companies that are the worst. So far I know that Starbucks is going to be one of the places that I choose because that's a common spot where people love to spend their money.

Source #2:

"Helping the Homeless in Philadelphia." Sunday Breakfast Rescue Mission, 2 Feb. 2022, <https://sundaybreakfast.org/>.

I chose this website because this is a possible shelter where I can donate my care packages. This place is somewhere that is accessible to me so I won't have to transport my care packages so far. I know that I'm able to participate and make donations for the shelter.

Source #3:

Farmiloe, Brett. "10 Ways Small Businesses Can Give Back to the Community." SCORE, SCORE, 29 July 2021, <https://www.score.org/blog/10-ways-small-businesses-can-give-back-community>.

I believe that this source will be helpful to me because I plan to talk about how small businesses can give back to the community. This will allow me to strategize these different ways on how to incorporate how to give back to everyone. This will also give me a chance to make a smoother transition into my slides for me.

Source #4:

Williams, Yona. "34 Brands That Give Back (2022 List of Companies)." The Giving Assistant Blog, 14 Oct. 2021, <https://blog.givingassistant.org/shopping/giving-back/brands-that-give-back/>.

I think this website might be helpful for me because there is a list of companies that do give back to the community. The approach I'm trying to take is a comparison and contrast between the two. I hope to find at least two companies that are not as known so people can take the time to do some research about them.

Dickinson, Grace. "Here's Where You Can Donate Winter Clothes in Philly to Help People Experiencing Homelessness." Https://Www.inquirer.com, The Philadelphia Inquirer, 31 Dec. 2021, <https://www.inquirer.com/philly-tips/where-to-donate-winter-clothes-philadelphia-20201214.html>.

I find this website helpful because it gives me a list of shelters Instead of one. This is going to be helpful because I and Ms.Gade are going to look at which one is most accessible to us. We want to make sure that it's easy to access transportation-wise.

Source #6:

Daniel. "How to Make Homeless Care Kits That Actually Help " All Gifts." All Gifts Considered, 10 Feb. 2022, <https://allgiftsconsidered.com/how-to-make-homeless-care-kits-that-actually-help/>.

I found this source to be helpful because it gives me insight into what I could put inside of my care package bags. I knew that I wanted to do a toothbrush and toothpaste. But, I wasn't so sure about what type of food to put in there even though it states on the website that tuna and crackers would be good. How do you know that these people eat that? So I think I want to do a bag of chips because you can never go wrong with them.

Source #7:

"Amazon.com: Drawsting Bag Bulk 6 Pieces Cinch Drawstring ..." Amazon, <https://www.amazon.com/Drawsting-Pieces-Cinch-Drawstring-Backpacks/dp/B098NC2DLZ>.

This source helped me find what type of bags that I wanted to put the items in. I knew that I wanted to have a couple of things inside the bag. But I didn't know what size would be appropriate to buy and I also wanted to have something that they could carry on their backs. I found the jaw string bags and thought that would be the perfect thing for them to carry and I can put a lot of stuff in them.

Source #8:

“Wholesale Hygiene Products.” Backpacks USA,
<https://www.backpacksusa.com/collections/bulk-hygiene-kits>.

This was a really good source because I realized that I didn't have to buy everything separately. This website allows me to buy a care package that includes the following toothbrush, toothpaste, comb, shampoo and conditioner, and many more. So that means the only thing that I would have to buy is water, chips, and stuff that I can bake cookies with.

Source #9:

Burmila, Ed. “Jeff Bezos, Amazon and Why 'Charity' Is the Wrong Solution.” Rolling Stone, Rolling Stone, 25 June 2018, <https://www.rollingstone.com/politics/politics-news/jeff-bezos-amazon-and-why-charity-is-the-wrong-solution-253693/>.

This source was helpful because it talks about how Jeff Bezos was going to donate 33 million to 1,000 students to go to college. But while doing that he's cutting the wages of his Amazon workers and they're working overtime. This will be something to talk about because although he's doing a “good gesture” he's still affecting people in the community by garnishing their wages.

Source #10:

Schleifer, Theodore. “The Obscure Rule That Is Discouraging Billionaires' Foundations from Going Big on Coronavirus.” Vox, Vox, 1 May 2020, <https://www.vox.com/recode/2020/5/1/21242144/billionaires-foundations-giving-money-coronavirus-fight>.

I found this source to be helpful because it talks about why billionaires don't give back to the community. This is going to be a helpful source because I'm going to tie them in with the companies to give them some more insight like Jeff Bezos.
