The One and Only Man

Dear readers, I introduce myself as Ignacio Lorenzo. I'm here to give you an explanation on why I am who I am. I lean more towards giving people information on my perspective on life and how our lives should be enjoyed. I seize every opportunity I'm given and choose a good path that will guarantee to give me chances in life moving forward. I'm from a very unique background that I like to share and express. I find my culture very interesting and would even question myself on why my parents grew up with such a distinctive ethnicity. This presentation will provide you with more detailed information and give you an overview of everything I know about myself. I continue to grow as a person and show many values and capabilities on why I have the potential to become someone great. Nevertheless there is more towards life than people think, I believe that everyone should cherish what they have and use that as their ability to gain more. Everyone is destined to achieve something in life whether it's little or big, that is something to be proud of. This magazine should show you why hard work can get you anywhere in life. It will provide you with many things.

I've been playing soccer ever since I was young, approximately 8 years old. I managed to adapt and improve my skills each and every day gaining more mobility and strength. During the years playing, I've faced many different challenges such as getting injured, playing with no motivation, getting beat by your opponent and those are just a few. I really enjoy playing the sport and I also enjoy playing with the people. The game seems harder than it looks due to people normally specifying how it is just kicking a ball and running but in reality you gotta have a winning mentality and be ready to get tackled in any position. You got to have the vision and chemistry between you and your teammates, being able to pass the ball around with no pressure. The reason why I love this sport and why I am so passionate about it is because when you step on the field you get this great feeling and sensation of being able to play soccer. I'm so passionate to win trophies with my team and get a win every game.

The love for the game is unreal and the teammates give it their all throughout the 90 mins we play. Leveling up with your team is something special. You go from being bad then all of sudden your training improves and it really boosts your self confidence. There will always be days where you won't win and take a L and it's okay because you learn and move onto the next game. Some opponents will be better than others and that's the reason you got to get better, you can't fall behind and lack because an opponent is better than you. I believe that is the game, I should continue to practice and train my weaknesses so I can get better. Improving is a main thing in the love of the sport. You always have to give more and be able to withstand the hard work. Discipline is what I believe gets you through many things and the dedication you have to have has to be levels above the other person.

Making your family proud is another reason why I love playing soccer. It shows how far you came from being the worst kid at the sport but now you are at the top level. The hard work pays off and shows how much work you put into making yourself known. Right now I'm not where I am but there is still time to improve and achieve. The support always feels nice, you get support from people you know and they cheer for you to do your best. You give what you can and get the results you get from that. This sport takes lots of dedication and hard work. It shows who you are and how passionate you are, so showing your potential is something people love to see. Soccer can be considered a top sport and give you knowledge not only on the pitch. You will learn a lot and showcase your ability to work hard. Many accomplishments can be done and you can go a long way with your career playing soccer.

A moment in my educational history was in my middle school days. I struggled with many subjects such as math and science which caused me to procrastinate and get low average grades for those classes. My mentality wasn't what I wanted it to be and I needed motivation to do and focus on my work. People around me such as my classmates helped me gain motivation and made me realize how easy science and math really was. The area and community of the school was very helpful, they gave me advice to enrich my education and help me throughout my year. Many causes of failure are your determination to get your work done and for me I wasn't too determined to do many things. I lacked the necessities of getting stuff done which resulted in hours and hours of trying to get those assignments done. I personally believe in the phrase "Everything happens for a reason" because I truly believe that anything could happen and is possible for a good reason. I think the lack of motivation and determination I had reflected on my personal character. It made me gain lots of knowledge and make more wiser decisions when it came to work and projects. Assignment wise I achieved and improved slowly but surely, it made me realize that you have to take responsibility for your own work and what you do. This helped shape me into becoming a better learner and actually learning new things. You can learn and grow, growing is a part of who you are as a learner and progress is what is needed. There is no need to hold yourself from becoming someone big, take your chances now and use them wisely. Education can be hard for me especially when it comes to taking tests and doing projects. It could benefit you in different ways in the long run.
