Website 1:

"HTML & CSS Full Course - Beginner to Pro." YouTube, 5 February 2022, ▶ HTML & CSS Full Course - Beginner to Pro . Accessed 25 January 2023.

- Through the youtube video I was able to get the best understanding of what I was gonna create and what I needed. It listed a bunch of sources that I could use and a bunch of software that were compatible with my laptop. If it wasn't for this youtube link I would definitely not get through it. But it was definitely beginner friendly and would definitely recommend it to anyone out there that wants to learn coding. It states everything a beginner needs in order to understand what CSS and HTMl is. It goes into depth on how it works and what it does.

Website 2:

"Learn HTML." Codecademy, Learn HTML | Codecademy . Accessed 25 January 2023.
- So what this website helps with is explaining in depth what HTML is and how the basic person can learn it so easily. I think HTML is easier to understand than CSS and I had less difficulty understanding it. The reason I say this is because I practiced already with Mr.Hernandez my junior year so it's still fresh in my mind. So what I'm learning is still fresh in my mind because to me it's basic but I was confused a bit because some of the skills needed on this softwares were different from the ones I'm used to.

Website 3:

"Intro to HTML and CSS | Free Courses." Udacity, Intro to HTML and CSS | Free Courses | Udacity . Accessed 25 January 2023.

- Now this website I provided shows a basic introduction on a one on one scale on what to do and how to do it. It provides tasks and challenges that challenge the user in order to create some muscle memory so that you can apply it to your own set of code. Now I gotta say this website helped a lot when I was learning the language again because the last time I learned this was a couple of years ago, But with the one-on -one challenges it taught me and refreshed my memory on what I needed to apply to my own website.

Website 4: HTML corrector (HTML fixing tool). Makes HTML valid 🔧, HTML corrector .
Accessed 25 January 2023.
- Now this website was such a clutch for me when making it. The reason I say this is because when making it I had so many errors but with this corrector it helped me fix all my mistakes that I had when making it. It was frustrating without this website because I was so lost and one of my peers actually suggested this website. It helped me open my eyes over the most simplest mistakes I had and like that it fixed itself. It's like a cheat code when making a website . I would highly suggest this website to anyone having issues with their own codes.

Website 5: Parvez, Faizan. "Introduction to CSS | CSS Tutorial for Beginners." Great Learning, Introduction to CSS | CSS Tutorial for Beginners . Accessed 25 January 2023.

- Now what this website is, it's actually an introduction to CSS again because it gives more in depth and more courses on how to work with CSS. Now despite everything and going through different courses they all helped me learn something new everytime and how to improve every line of code. But let me not get out of track. This website was extremely helpful when it came to putting everything together and actually making it work without going through so many trial and errors. It also had some new challenges I had never seen before but it definitely helped improve my coding skills on the softwares they provided to practice on. So now on my final product I know how to apply these skills to use.

Website 6:"What is CSS: Cascading Style Sheet Explained for Beginners." Hostinger, What is CSS: Cascading Style Sheet Explained for Beginners . Accessed 25 January 2023.

- This website is like heaven to any coder out there. It's a cheat sheet in a way because it shows all your mistakes in CSS and also shows demonstrations on when you link it with HTML. Now this cheat sheet is definitely helpful for any last minute questions you may have when creating your own website. So when I was practicing on a dummy website I stumbled across this problem but with this website it saved me hours on hours of work. It was literally such a clutch when I used it because it also had additional links if you needed to help you.

Website 7: "How to Fix CSS file is not Working with HTML in Chrome | Problem Solved." YouTube, 18 August 2021,
▶️ 👉 How to Fix CSS file is not Working 😃 with HTML in Chrome | Problem Solved 😃 . Accessed 25 January 2023.

- Now this website also helped out when making the website I needed. Since I'm still going through trial and error I was getting frustrated so I used my sources such as youtube. This video broke it down on how to fix my own code and how to make it work without deleting a bunch of lines of code that I would later need. I wrote about this on my timeline on how this process was so frustrating and how I had to take a break from it. But this website was definitely a clutch for me. I would highly recommend this website to any new coder out there.

Website 8 : "HTML Tutorial." W3Schools, HTML Tutorial . Accessed 25 January 2023.
- This website is another tutorial on how to help you learn more on HTML. It was one of the websites I looked up to when making my timeline. It taught me more skills on how to make my website and how to let the user interact with it and how to make it look all nice and professional for the user. I wanna make the theme look professional and that's exactly what this website sold to me. It taught me exactly how to make it look nice and not all ugly in a way. I want people at SLA to look at it and say they are proud to use it. I don't want it to look sketchy or anything like that so this website helped me make it look exactly how I want my website to look.

Website 9:"HTML Tutorial for Beginners: HTML Crash Course." YouTube, 11 January 2021, ▶️ HTML Tutorial for Beginners: HTML Crash Course . Accessed 25 January 2023.

- This video shows me one on one on how to maneuver with HTML and it's really beginner friendly. It didn't lose me at any point throughout the video but instead it went slow and steady for the person watching the video. It also had a useful transcript to look through so you know exactly what you need. So it was really helpful when I needed something or an example to look up to. I would highly suggest new coders to look at this website whenever they need help or guidance. Even if you knew this website was really beginner friendly and taught me new things I didn't know before.

Website 10 : "Learn HTML – Full Tutorial for Beginners (2022)." YouTube, 8 March 2022, ▶️ Learn HTML – Full Tutorial for Beginners (2022) . Accessed 25 January 2023.

Even if you knew this website was really beginner friendly and taught me new things I didn't know before so It's a 10/10 for me.

Website 11: How to fill out common application forms (guide) (guide) guide, step. "Application guide for first-year students Right arrow." Common App, https://www.commonapp.org/apply/first-year-students. Accessed 23 January 2023.
So what this website provided was some resources that I would use to introduce to my final capstone idea. It's a website that shows how to fill out the common application because I know when I was doing it , it was very stressful because I was confused on how to navigate everything and it was just very hard. I did the application alone and my parents didn't know how to help but this website alone helped me navigate with the things I was confused about. So now I wanna share this video with the upcoming seniors who might encounter the same thing.

Website 12:Scholarships for College: Find and Apply Online for Free | Going Merry, https://www.goingmerry.com/. Accessed 23 January2023.

Now what this website provided for me was scholarship opportunities. I don't come from money so I relied on scholarships. I managed to qualify for a twenty thousand dollar scholarship because of this website. I really hope my peers will be able to use this website the same way I did and get multiple scholarships from it. I know it's filled with potential and that it'll reach out to my peers to help them out. It's a great opportunity based website in which almost anyone qualifies for any amount of scholarships and it's really up to the person to make that decision.

Website 13: College Scorecard | College Scorecard, https://collegescorecard.ed.gov/. Accessed 23 January 2023.

Now what this website provided for me was the amount each college cost and what I could potentially afford comfortably. It showed me everything I needed to know about and prices. I didn't know much until I came across this website. It shows what other colleges have to offer. I think it's a good source to admire and tag because it's all in one place which is much easier to navigate . Unless you have a lot of money and are able to afford the college you wanna go to, I suggest viewing this website to know what you can afford.

Website 14: College Insight, http://college-insight.org/. Accessed 23 January 2023.
Now what this website provides is additional information that can possibly help you decide what major you want to pursue. It's very easy to access and it gives you a list of colleges that support that major. It's really easy to navigate and it's free so you can decide on your own what you wanna do. It's where most people found out what major they wanna do and what they wanna study for the next four years in college. So if you're confused on what you want to do then visit this website to help you direct yourself in the right direction and make the right decision .

Website 15: Help for College Now, https://www.helpforcollegenow.com/. Accessed 23 January 2023.

Now if you're confused on college reuqiremnets.This is the website to look out for because it gives you information about what you might need help with. Any questions you might have are accessible through the website. Best part is that you can access it whenever you want so it's basically 24/7. So whenever you want help just check out the website and get the help you need.
