

Leadership (styles, possessions, people)

1. <https://www.gse.upenn.edu/faculty/chris-lehmann> University of Penn, CEO of Science Leadership Academy, Chris Lehmann, 2026 Penn Graduate School of Education

This source is a quick article about Principal Lehmann. The source highlights his success in the education system, noting that he is the founder and CEO of ScienceLeadership Academy. I go into the origins of the idea of SLA before it became a physical school. It also really highlights his educational accolades. He was the winner of the McGraw Prize for Education. I used this source to formulate specific questions about his educational leadership.

2. <https://nbcuacademy.com/documentary-filmmaking/> How to make A documentary, NBCU. Published Tue, Jan 24 2023 2:39 PM EST Updated: 2 years ago

This Article from the NBCU Academy is a great source for expanding my understanding of filmmaking, specifically about the genre of documentary filmmaking. This source gives a general rundown on pre-filmmaking tactics, like time management, and gives good suggestions on making your first documentary a short one. Not only does it cut editing time, but it also teaches you priority in the subject and content ideas that you include in your documentary. I will primarily use this to better formulate a proactive filmmaking mindset.

3. <https://filmint.nu/ten-rules-for-doing-documentary-interviews-the-right-way-roger-nygard/> September 4, 2024, posited by Matthew Sorrento, Ten Rules for Documentary Speaking about different cameras and filmmaking skills.

Matthew Sorrento's article, published on September 4, 2024, outlines ten rules for conducting documentary interviews, emphasizing the technical and interpersonal skills required for successful filmmaking. This is complemented by MasterClass insights from Ken Burns, who provides expert tips on documentary cinematography and visual storytelling. Both sources highlight the importance of camera selection and the filmmaker's ability to engage subjects effectively to capture authentic narratives.

4. <https://www.masterclass.com/articles/filmmaker-ken-burnss-top-tips-for-documentary-cinematography>

The core of Ken Burns's approach is the belief that cinematography in documentaries should not be merely decorative but functional. He advocates for a "treatment" of the subject matter that prioritizes the story above technical flair. For Burns, the camera acts as a bridge between the audience and history, requiring a disciplined balance between artistic expression and factual representation. He stresses the importance of intentionality: every pan, tilt, or zoom should have a specific purpose in guiding the viewer's attention and emotional response.

5. <https://www.forbes.com/sites/kevinkruse/2013/04/09/what-is-leadership/>

This source is a deep dive into the general concept of Leadership. Going into most misconceptions of leadership, for example, position in the social or career hierarchy. Also touching on how leadership isn't about the titles or the accolades, but the people. Also, one thing I found interesting was that it claimed that leadership has nothing to do with personal attributes. I wanna use this source for speaking to interviewees about leadership and different leadership concepts/Ideas.

6. <https://practicaltheory.org/blog/> Practical Theory: A View from the Schoolhouse Blog Chris Lehmann

This is a blog written by Chris Lehmann, where he shares his thoughts and ideas on relevant events that connect to or pertain to education and the system of education. He provides his personal insights and thoughts about not only the Philadelphia school system, but also education as a whole in America. One thing that really stood out to me is how he alternates topics and tends to also speak on ideas and concepts as they pertain to the education system. Will definitely use this to formulate questions on his blog and how it could connect to his leadership.

7. <https://www.cbsnews.com/philadelphia/news/boxing-mentor-changes-thousands-of-lives-inside-old-north-philly-gym/> CBS News On Fred Jenkins and ABC Gym on 26th & Jefferson St December 12, 2016 / 8:13 PM EST / CBS Philadelphia

This article is about both legendary trainers, father and son duo, Fred Jenkins senior and Fred Jenkins Jr. This article goes over the poetic origins of the boxing coach duo, and how they faced adversity in maintaining the gym and the program. It also covers their respective contributions to boxing, as Fred senior was a well-respected trainer who trained the likes of "Charlie Choo Choo Brown." And Fred Jr.'s successful boxing career. It also highlights the influence of Fred senior on Fred Jr's career as a young trainer. I will use this source to formulate questions to ask Fred Jr about his impact and influence on the community.

8. <https://womendeliver.org/womensleadership/>

This article explores and highlights the importance of women in leadership roles and spaces. The resource from Women Deliver explores the critical importance of women's leadership roles and the necessity of inclusive spaces. It highlights how diverse representation in decision-making processes contributes to more equitable and effective outcomes globally. This advocacy focuses on breaking down systemic barriers that prevent women from reaching the highest levels of organizational and political leadership.

9. <https://pmc.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/articles/PMC8892492/> Athlete Leadership Development Within Teams: Current Understanding and Future Directions

Research published in PMC (2022) provides a comprehensive review of athlete leadership within sports teams, distinguishing between formal roles like team captain and informal leaders who influence teammates through natural interactions. The paper categorizes athlete leaders into four roles: task, motivational, social, and external leaders. Effective development programs, such as the 5R Shared Leadership Program, focus on building a shared social identity rather than just individual traits to enhance team functioning and performance. Coaches and mentorship models play a vital role in this process by empowering athletes and creating cultures where shared leadership can flourish.

10. <https://www.gallup.com/cliftonstrengths/en/356072/how-to-be-better-leader.aspx>

The Gallup article on CliftonStrengths provides actionable strategies for individuals to become better leaders by identifying and leveraging their unique talents. It emphasizes that leadership is not a one-size-fits-all approach but is most effective when rooted in personal strengths and self-awareness. This resource bridges the gap between theoretical leadership concepts and applied personal development.