

A day in the Life of an Australian Child

By: Lena Bruce

Normal Wake up

Australian children live a normal life, they have bed times, nap times, and play time. They have the amount of resources as any other child such in America.

Family

About 14% of Australian child live in a single parent home. So majority of the children have both their parents, causing the depression rates to decrease.

Education

Each student in Australia, whether indigenous Australian or local Australians, they are given equal opportunity to have an education. Over the years, the indigenous population of students started to decrease, but over the last 3 years they have increased by 4%. Almost everyone in Australia is literate.

Health

The best part about children in Australia is that children and everyone else, has access to Universal Health Care. The children will be very happy to know that their life expectancy is one of the top highest because 78.7 for men and 83.5 for women. The universal health care gives the people of Australia a fair amount of say in what doctor they want to see and also the cost is little to none, causing children to be able to go to the dentist without a care in the world.
